ASSUMPTIONS

What I decided for you — override anything here

Scaled recipe 1.5x for 6

Source recipe reads as 4 servings (700 g pork); amounts below are x1.5. Scale back down if 4 is actually correct.

Mustard = Dijon, paprika = smoked

Recipe names both as the preferred option ('Dijon or regular', 'smoked paprika works great'). Use plain mustard/sweet paprika if you'd rather.

Only the pork dish is planned in detail

Salad, mash, rice, and bread are serving suggestions from the source recipe, not planned here — ask if you want one of them worked out too.

Vegetable oil = rapeseed oil

Rimi's plain 'vegetable oil' shelf item is rapeseed (rapšu eļļa). Swap for sunflower oil if you prefer.

Frying pan is generic, not tracked

No specific frying pan is logged in the kitchen inventory; use any large frying pan/skillet that fits pork in a single uncrowded layer.

AEG hob heat settings, model unconfirmed

Owned hob is AEG/Electrolux, 4 zones, heat 0-9 + Booster; exact model logged as representative (IBX64200CB). Adjust settings to your hob's actual response.

🔄 INGREDIENTS

	pork loin	1050 g	boneless
	onion	2 (300 g)	sliced
	garlic	3 cloves	minced
	heavy cream	350 ml	35%
	Dijon mustard	1.5 tsp
	vegetable oil	1.5 tbsp	for searing
	salt	to taste
	black pepper	to taste	ground
	smoked paprika	1.5 tsp
	thyme	pinch	optional

3 STEPS

1

Weigh and slice pork

 Cook

 1050 g

 1-1.5 cm

 pork loin

1050 g

Weigh the pork loin on the kitchen scale, then slice it across the grain into pieces about 1-1.5 cm thick. Cutting across the grain, not with it, keeps each piece tender.

☑ Pieces are evenly ~1 cm thick

Standalone kitchen scale

2

Season pork

 Cook

 both sides

 salt

 black pepper

 smoked paprika

to taste

to taste

1.5 tsp

Rub the sliced pork on both sides with salt, ground black pepper, and smoked paprika. Coat evenly so every piece browns and tastes the same.

☑ Spices visible and even on every slice

3

Slice onion, mince garlic

Cook

sliced / minced

onion

2 (300 g)

garlic

3 cloves

Slice the onions thinly and mince the garlic; keep them separate since the garlic goes in later. Fine mincing on the garlic stops it burning once it hits the hot pan.

☑ Onion in thin half-moons, garlic finely minced

4

Sear pork in batches

Cook

heat 8-9

1-1.5 min/side

pork loin

1050 g

vegetable oil

1.5 tbsp

Heat the oil in the frying pan over high heat and sear the pork in 2-3 uncrowded batches, about 1-1.5 minutes per side until well browned. Crowding the pan steams the meat instead of browning it. Set seared pork aside.

☑ Pork deeply browned, not yet cooked through

5

Cook onion and garlic

Cook

heat 5-6

3-4 min

onion

2 (300 g)

garlic

3 cloves

In the same pan, lower the heat and cook the onion 3-4 minutes until soft, then add the garlic and cook 30 seconds more. Same pan keeps the browned pork bits for flavour; the garlic only needs seconds before it turns bitter.

☑ Onion translucent, garlic fragrant not browned

6

Build mustard sauce

Cook

heat 3-4

1-2 min

 heavy cream

350 ml

 Dijon mustard

1.5 tsp

 thyme

pinch

Pour in the cream and stir in the mustard and thyme, simmering gently until combined. A light simmer stops the cream from splitting.

✔ Sauce lightly thickened, mustard fully blended

7

Simmer pork in sauce

Cook

heat 2-3

3-5 min

 pork loin

1050 g

Return the seared pork and its resting juices to the pan and simmer gently for 3-5 minutes, just until cooked through. Pork loin is lean, so pull it the moment it's no longer pink at the centre to keep it juicy.

✔ Pork no longer pink at centre, sauce coats a spoon

Taste, adjust, and serve

Cook

✔

adjust seasoning

 salt

to taste

 black pepper

to taste

Taste the sauce and adjust salt and pepper as needed, then serve hot with your chosen sides. Salad, mash, rice, or crusty bread all pair well.

✔ Seasoning balanced, plated hot

- ⚠ Wash hands and boards after handling raw pork
- ⚠ Pork must reach no visible pink at the centre before serving
